How To Save Money on Your Household's Needs

Recently opened MilwaukeeThrift.com, 4202 S. Howell Avenue, got its unlikely start from a popular cable television show.

"I watched Storage Wars and began going to Storage Unit Auctions. I put in my bids and won a few times," explained Shane Linskey, who with his wife and two sons operates the resale shop that passes on much-needed savings on popular household goods.

"I found some very interesting items in those units and wanted to find more," he added. "I sold some items on eBay and Craigs List, but still had so many other interesting items that I didn't know what to do with them." After several successful yard sales and flea market sales, Linskey decided to open the store.

"There are so many treasures out there that some people no longer want and other people are looking for," Linskey continued.

"It is fun to watch thrifty people come into our store and find interesting items that bring back memories and start stories to tell others. We find some wonderful things in our quest and are always looking for someone who needs those items and want to acquire them at a good price."

"Being a smaller store, I can give a greater discount on usable items since our overhead costs are less than larger stores," said Linskey. "In these tough economic times we are helping the community by supplying them with low cost merchandise so they can have clothes, household items, tools, furniture, and special things for a reasonable price they can afford."

"The first week the store was open about 30 visitors a day from the neighborhood and surrounding community stopped in to say hello, introduce themselves and welcome us to the neighborhood," he said. "They were happy to see what we had in the store and were glad to see this type of store in the area."

MilwaukeeThrift.com doesn't restrict itself to storage unit auctions to obtain items, and will remove leftover items from garage sales, estate sales at no charge, as well as pick up unwanted items for realty companies and property managers. "We're doing our part to help the environment by keeping these unwanted items out of the landfills," Linskey added.
